

Zenna Faraj Elhasan is the general counsel at the Kresge Foundation and serves as the secretary for the foundation's board of trustees. She is responsible for all of the legal affairs of the foundation, works to ensure the development and enforcement of policies and practices, assists the board with governance, and manages outside relationships. In the past, she was the corporation counsel for Wayne County, Michigan where she specialized in commercial litigation, federal civil rights compliance, labor and employment law, and real estate and tax matters. Previously, she was the judicial magistrate and director of probation for the 20th District Court in Dearborn Heights, Michigan, and was a partner with Allen Brothers, Attorneys, and Counselors, PLLC. Elhasan has a bachelor's degree in biology from the University of Michigan—Dearborn, and JD from the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law, and participated in the Young American Leaders Program at Harvard Business School. Finally, she has won many prestigious awards, and in 2020, she was appointed by Governor Gretchen Whitmer to serve as a Commissioner on the Michigan Civil Rights Commission.